Dr. Henry M. Leipziger Tells of Its Rights and Duties.

One of Six More Lectures in
"The Evening World" Course.

The Discourses Again Well Attended and the Interest Growing.

That THE EVENING WORLD knows what the people will like and what will entertain them to their taste is attested by the increasing popularity of this course of free lectures in the public school buildings, inaugurated by its efforts.

Last evening there was a large attendance at all the school-rooms where lectures were given.

The lectures for the evening were "How to Study Science at Home," by Prof. Sloane

"Rights and Duties of Citizenship," Dr.
 Leiper; "The American Idea," Prof.
 Lincoln: "The Chemistry of What We Eat and Drink," Prof. Mott: "The Eye and Ear," Dr. Tansley, and "American Poets," Prof. Zachos.
 Grammar School No. 42, 30 Allen Street was the place where the "Rights and Duties of Citizenship" were expounded, and, incidentally, the great American eagle was un-loosened and permitted to flap its wings.
 Leiper made the people come hither from countries as far as the West Indies. Here every man, so long as he conducts himself properly, is an unworried king.
 Here there are no self-confined, so-called nobles to look down on the masses.
 Here in this country the masses are particular. Majority rules. The vote of the largest working laborer counts for as much as the white man in the land.

The colored citizen has equal rights with the native-born. The German boy sits along side the Irish, the Swede by the Italian, and the Frenchman and the Jew are learning to become useful and worthy citizens.

They will be even more intensely American than the native Americans.

In 1776, when the three millions of people who had fled from the tyrannies of America out of the yoke of English despotism, the conservative of Europe shook their heads and declared that no people could govern themselves and that only a monarch, a monarch sent from heaven, could rule the millions.

These ideas have scarcely been justified. Our country has passed through a terrible crisis, notably that of the great civil war, the most terrible known in history. Yet, when that war was over, the soldiers put aside their weapons and the millions of people returned with a readiness that caused the whole world to marvel.

Every four years, too, a fierce political battle is fought, and when it is over, the vanquished party philosophically accepts the result and cheerfully aids in carrying out its opponent's policy, and the President, elected by the victorious party, is not a resident alien, but the son of a native-born citizen.

Anarchy and Socialism have been forced prominently on public notice of late years ideas come from countries which are ground down by the iron heel of despotism. The authority to distinguish between a country controlled by the will of a single despot and a government framed by the sovereign will of the people themselves.

Absolute liberty would produce the same results as slavery, as the strong would oppress the weak. The liberty we enjoy is therefore, not absolute liberty, but a liberty conducive to the general welfare.

Where the best laws are there will be the greatest liberty.

gave a five-course dinner to his friends in Hamilton Street Jail on Sunday afternoon is pronounced false by Warden Byrnes.

Among other cold-blooded fakes in the canon of the Evening Star was the absurd story that Mayor Grant had made a bargain to appoint Corliss C. Beckman to a judgeship, and a grossly exaggerated story of Sen. Perott's relations with his manager. The senile paper is kept pretty busy correcting the systematic fibbing of its wayward and puny little offspring.
